Yet, getting baking supplies during the period proved to be somewhat of a challenge, thanks to long queues and higher demand, among a myriad of other reasons.

Well, if you're planning on baking yourself some delicious bread or pastries this weekend, you might be in for some good news.

As we enter Phase 1 of reopening, popular baking supplies store Phoon Huat announced via a Facebook post on Tuesday (2 Jun) that it will be doing away with its odd/even dates requirement.

<< No More Odd/Even Dates Entry >>

From 2 Jun, we will cease the Odd/Even Dates entry requirement at all our shops. This is because our queue is getting shorter and the current situation is easing up.

However, we still need to maintain a safe & healthy environment for all our staff and our customers, so please review our essential shopping tips before you head down to our shop to get your baking essentials.

Our shops are open from 10am to 7pm.

Stay safe & healthy!

Earlier last month, Phoon Huat – as well as its subsidiary, Redman – introduced the ddd/even dates entry system in early May that only allowed access to shoppers according to the last digit of their NRIC/FIN.

The measure was aimed at cutting down the long lines seen outside the stores.

Please adhere to implemented measures

The removal of the Odd/Even Dates entry restriction at Phoon Huat will certainly come as great news for Circuit Bakers who picked up baking during the 2-month 'Circuit Breaker'.

That said, please adhere to the measures put in place by the store to help keep everyone safe.
